BOX 7 OLD AGE PENSION COMMITTEE

Minute book of Old Age Pension Committee for Lennox and Addington, Dec. 5, 1929 when the Committee was formed, until Dec. 21, 1934.

On Nov. 29, 1934, the Committe recommended: "...that the present system of dealing with applications for Old Age Pensions by means of Local Committees and Inspectors be continued, as we feel that this system offers the best possible check upon the worthiness of the applications received. It is also recommended that persons receiving the Old Age Pensions should be dis[en]franchised. It is recommended that a copy of these recommendations should be forwarded to the Minister of Public Welfare, Toronto."

THE RECORDS OF THE LENNOX AND ADDINGTON COUNTY COURT

The Role of the County Court in Ontario

The Canadian judicial system as we know it is founded on British law, but really took form at Confederation. Up until this time, each Province had a separate system. It took several years after Confederation to iron out differences and restructure the system under a final, federal authority. The County Courts, which exist in most Provinces, are the descendants of an earlier order, in which the Provincial Court was the final authority before the British Parliament or the Crown.

Under the Canadian system established after 1867, the County Courts have jurisdiction over both criminal and civil cases. However, the criminal jurisdiction is limited to cases which are considered minor, or to appeals from magistrates' courts or justice of the peace. The civil jurisdiction of the County Court is limited to cases in which the matter at issue is less than a fixed sum. (In 1966, for example, the amount had to be less then $1000.00.)

Below the County Court are the Surrogate Court, the Division Courts, the Magistrate Courts, and the courts of Special Jurisdiction.

Above the County Court is the Provincial Court, which hears cases in which the matter at issue is larger than the prescribed fixed sum, and more serious criminal offences.

Thus, the Records of the Lennox and Addington County Court are seldom concerned with glamorous, more newsworthy, cases, which would have been heard by higher courts. However, historically the County Court Judge sat with a jury at the General Sessions of the Peace, which could try cases outside the limites of the County Courts, but not under the jurisdication of the superior courts, as defined by Section 413 of the Criminal Code. Also, both the Sheriff and his Bailiff were involved in apprehending fugitives and serving summons for higher court cases, as well as for seizing property as directed by court decisions. In their papers may be found information pertaining to the more newsworthy offences.

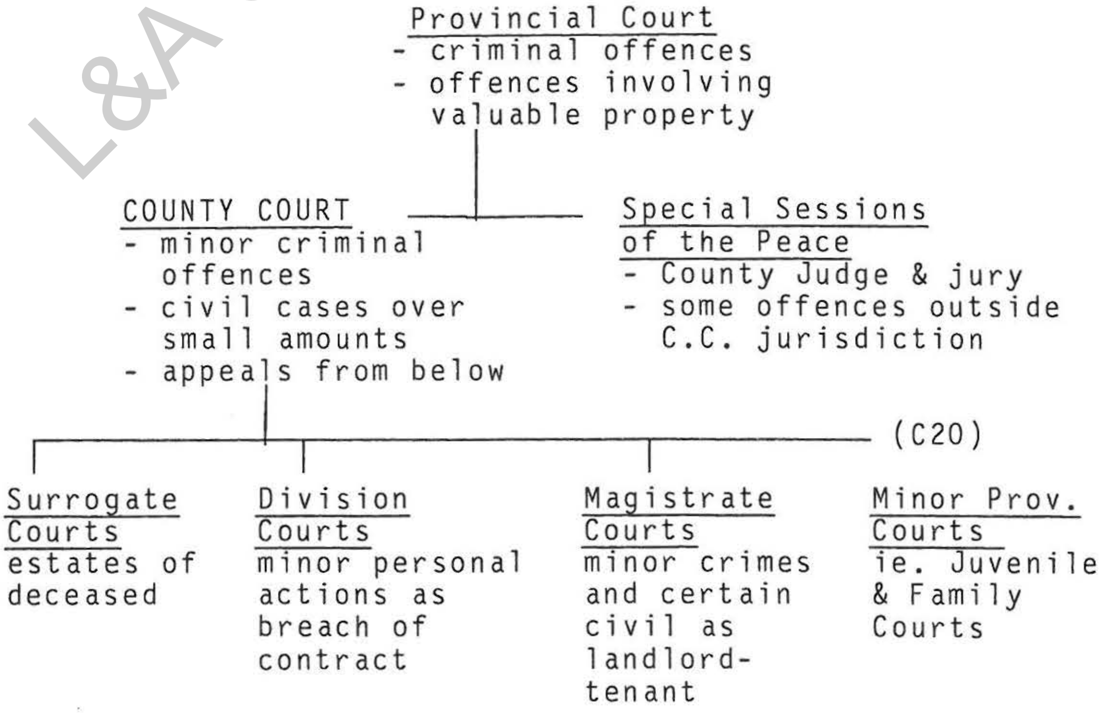
Non-indictable offences (offences against municipal regulations and other minor offences) were always tried by magistrates or justices of the peace. In 19th century Lennox and Addington, these included drunk and disorderly, prostitution and vagrancy.

All other offences were indictable and were tried by either a judge, or a judge and jury. In some minor cases, the accused was given his choice: magistrate, judge or judge and jury. Thus, the County Court judge could try certain, minor indictable offences, if elected by the accused. However, in order to expedite legal process and avoid clogging the courts with many minor cases, some indictable offences could be tried by a magistrate without the consent to the accused. These included offences which were considered both petty and common, such as assaulting an officer of the peace, bookmaking and theft of very minor items of property. The County Court would usually only hear these cases if the decision of the magistrate was appealed. If the offence was neither petty nor major, the accused had a choice, and in Lennox and Addington the defendants seem to have favoured judge or judge and jury.

If the offence was major, the accused could not chose to be tried by a judge. Major offences could only be tried by judge and jury. These included treason, sedition, piracy, rape and murder. Because of the serious nature of these offences, they were not heard in the County Court.

Most of the court business in Lennox and Addington, however, was non-indictable and related to personal property disputes, landlord-tenant strife, settlement of estates and bankruptcy.

The Lennox and Addington County Court System



Provincial Court
- criminal offences
- offences involving valuable property

COUNTY COURT
- minor criminal offences
- civil cases over small amounts
- appeals from below

Explanations of Some Words found in Legal Records

Court of Common Pleas

Process - to sue by legal process; to summon to court

Procedure - in law, the body of rules, whether of practice of pleading, whereby rights are effectuated through the proper remedies
- Procedure Books are a summary of the actions of the court

Docket - in law, a record kept by the court clerks, containing a list of parties litigant and minutes of the actions taken in each case
- also used to refer to a list of cases for trial or hearing
- in Lennox and Addington, judges the records kept by judges of the litigants, evidence heard and his decision are known as "Docket Books"

Bailiff - essentially, this man is the Sheriff's deputy. he serves warrants and writs, takes care of prisoners during trials and perserves order in the court. He also arrests persons, summons juries, collects fines, attends assizes and executes writs and processes. He is alos the custodian of property or business under dispute or seized by order of the Court. In the 19th century, he was paid extra for travelling on Court business. Bailiff's books record such trips, as well as summons served and property confiscated and/or sold.

Fiat - a short order or warrant, written by a judge. Essentially, a "fiat" means "let this be done".

BOX 2: Legal Proceedings

The contents of this box consist almost entirely of items used as "exhibits" in court cases, 1865-1928. They were numbered totally at random and are not sorted by case, date or type of document. Nevertheless, for ease of retrieval, they have been left in accession number order. Below is a summary of the file contents. Following is a detailed inventory, item by item.

File 1

Mortgages, deeds, leases, summons, sworn statements, invoices and letters used in court proceedings.

File 2

Autopsy, statement of accused, transcript of testimony at Coroner's Inquest from the Robinson murder trial, 1914.

File 3

Mortgages, deeds, leases, summons, sworn statements, invoices, notebooks and letters used in court proceedings.

File 4

Calendars of County and Division Court Sittings, 1912-1922 and 1958-9.

File 5

Poster used in poll for repeal of Dunkin By-Law, 1878. Also sworn statements of men who put up the posters as to where they were located.

BOX 3: Legal Proceedings

File 6

Evidence used in various cases, particularly Pringle vs Town of Napanee.

File 7

Hawley et al vs Charles Gildersleeve, 1866. This case concerns the charge of breach of contract. Hawley and several others sued Gildersleeve, the owner of the steamer "Bay of Quinte", on behalf of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, Napanee. Hawley claimed that they had booked the steamer for their church excursion, and that Gildersleeve had failed to show up.

File 8

Request for a telephone for the County Court House, signed by various County Court officers, 1884.

Summary of the prisoners in the County Gaol, Napanee, July-October, 1874.

File 9

Evidence used in various cases, particularly Hooper vs Herring (debt), 1884, and Light vs Cliff (breach of contract) re. Napanee Collegiate, 1890, and others.

File 10

Legal decisions taken 1904 relating to Sheriffs.
Plea for additional non-jury sittings in the County of Lennox and Addington, 1902
